December 22, 2010

WERE YOU THERE at the Commerce CFC rally on November 3? Four new videos on the CFC website show highlights from the event.

New Videos on the CFC Website

Have you visited the CFC web site lately? It changes almost every day. The latest addition is a set of four videos with highlights from the event. One video has interviews with some of your coworkers.

"The CFC is easy, it's painless, it's quick and it's very personal . . . There's such a variety of charities there, something for everyone . . . Just see your CFC Coordinator once a year, you can give to your favorite charity all year long through payroll deduction." – Pamela Nould, ESA

Another video provides interviews with several charities who participated in the charity fairs.

"Non-profits have been severely hit with the economic recession . . . there's not a lot of money that we make from selling products, so it's through the generosity of our neighbors and other folk that we're able to sustain and change the very social fabric of this city. So whether they donate to College Bound or they donate to some other organization, all of the non-profits benefit greatly from the CFC contributions." -- Kenneth Ward, College Bound

Have you turned in your CFC pledge form?

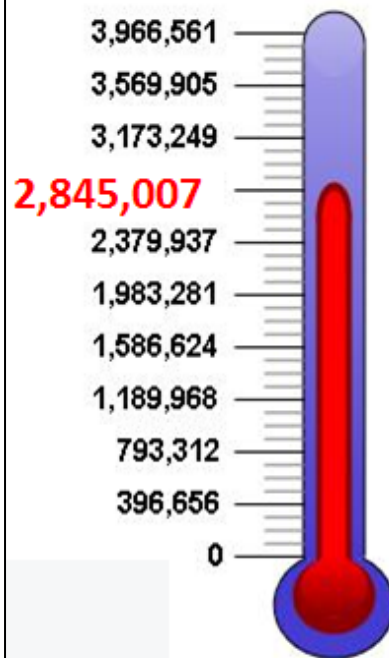

As of December 22, the Commerce Department has reached 72 percent of our CFC goal. That's progress, but we still have a way to go.

If you were putting off turning in your form, please take a few moments and do it today.

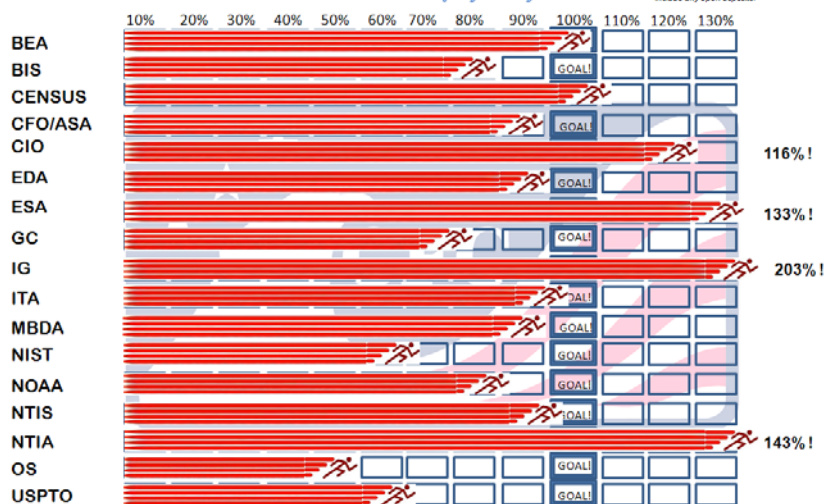

Your contribution to any of the 4,000 CFC provides 12 months of support for causes you believe in...but the clock doesn't start until you return your pledge card.

We're all counting on you!
